

Press Release

The Brussels Design Market changes its dates and wants to inform that it schedules its next edition on November 16 & 17, 2024.

- Initially planned for September 21 & 22, 2024, the Design Market moves its annual meeting to November. This was due to the change of the car-free Sunday date in Brussels, which has been moved to September 22, 2024, preventing the fair from being organized under optimal conditions, both for exhibitors and visitors.

- The organizers: "We are not concerned about changing the date to the Autumn. Visitors should be just as numerous to participate in the fair, which every year attracts a wider audience. November is certainly conducive to fair attendance and anticipates by a few weeks the consumption period associated with the end-of-year holidays."

- The March 2024 edition broke all attendance records with over 10,000 visitors present during the weekend.

- The November edition will also be an opportunity to celebrate the 35th edition of the Design Market, promising a series of surprises for this anniversary, which will welcome 155 exhibitors from all over Europe. A variety of 20th-century offerings that is totally unique, providing visitors with a range that no other fair of this type offers.

- Yet another sign of the fair's growth is its dynamic presence on social media, with the Brussels Design Market boasting over 75,000 followers on Instagram.
